FACULTY

"What the World expects of Christians is that they should get away from abstraction and confront the blood stained face of history, a face which history has taken on today."

Religion at Brooklyn Prep aims at aiding the students to form a mature Christian response to the problems which confront them in our rapidly changing society - the Hippies, relationships with adult members of the community, poverty, war, loneliness and discrimination.

In short religion, based on sound doctrine and a lively liturgy should help the student see and respond to "the bloodstained face of today world."

Wayne Johnson

Mr. Wayne N. Johnson. Theology.

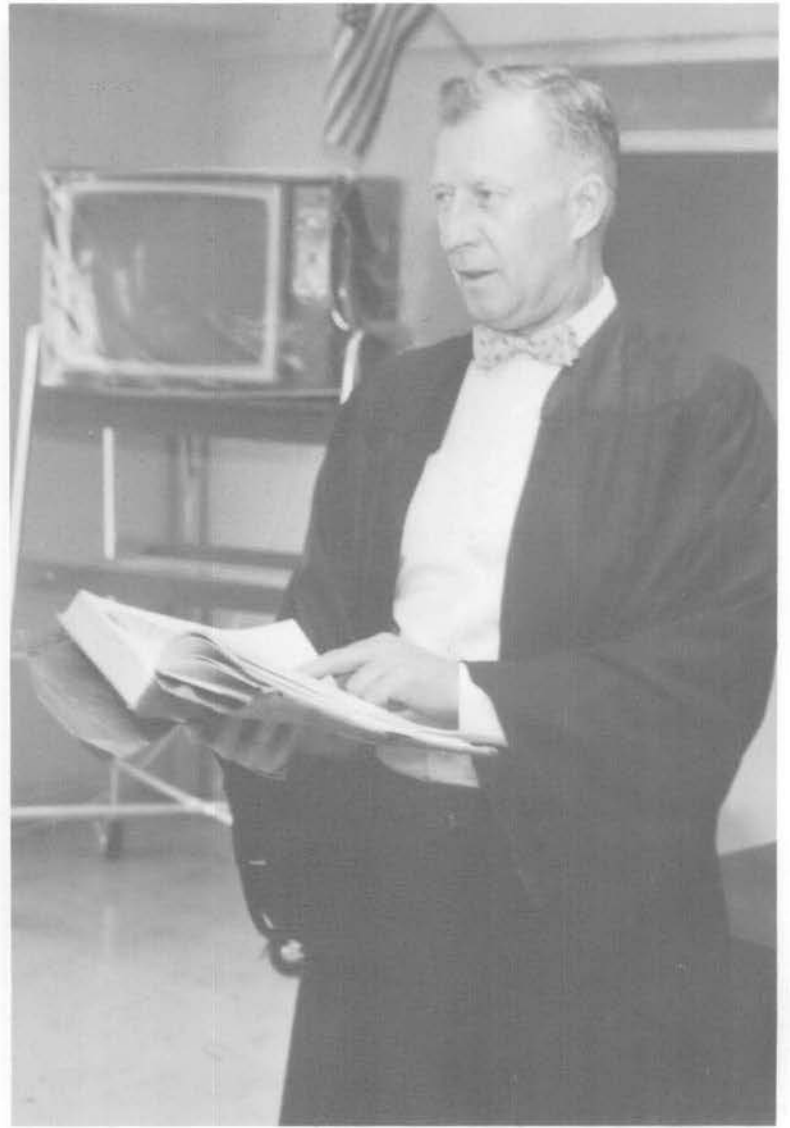

Mr. John A. Banach. Mathematics.

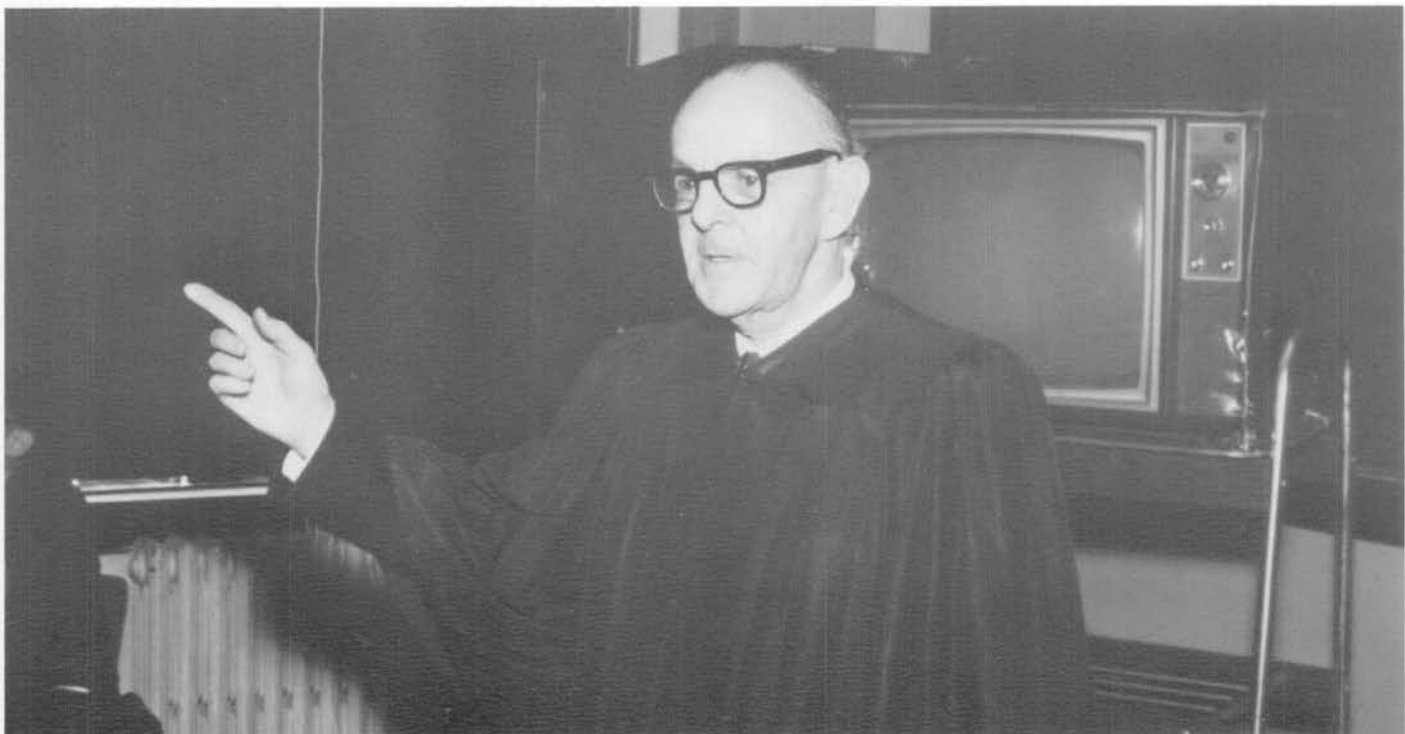

Rev. John L. Farrand, S.J. Chairman of the Modern Language Department, French.

Rev. Carl C. Beck, S.J. Theology, German, Student Counsellor to Freshmen.

Mr. Walter F. Doolan. Mathematics, Health, Coach of Varsity Swimming and Varsity Baseball.

Mr. Robert A. Nebot. Spanish, Faculty Advisor to Latin Sight Team.

English is... what? An enigma, I suppose, which attempts to make real to young men thoughts, emotions, and sentiments that they have never experienced. At this end of the scale it is the least practical of subjects; at the other end - the technical - it is the most practical.

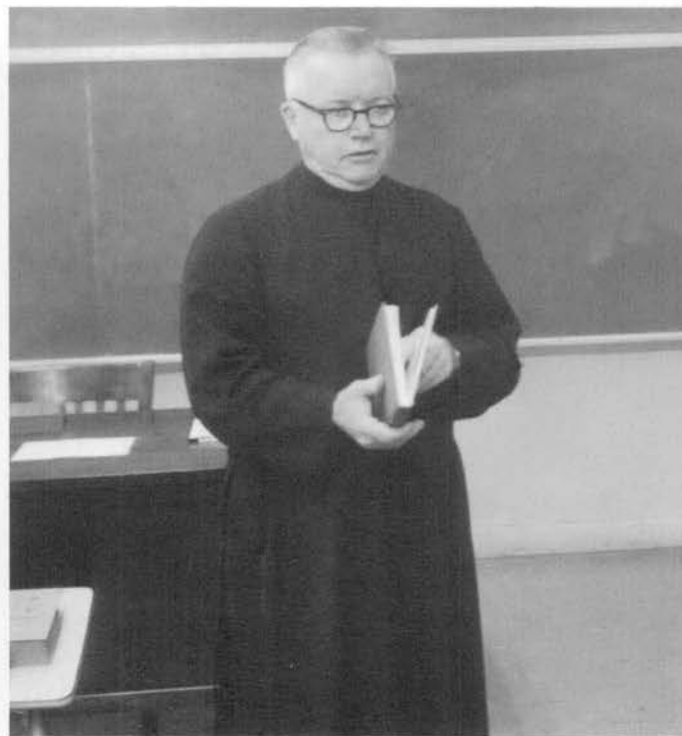

The flow of human thought in literature is so steady that, of necessity, English teachers fall a little further behind each day. And yet, there is so much of humanity to be conveyed through this subject that these slightly mad individuals stay with it despite its impossible demands on their time. They stay with it because once in a while, just once in a while, they succeed in conveying it. Edward Bartley

Mr. Edward J. Bartley. Chairman of the English Department, English, Faculty Advisor to Andros, Director of Educational Television, President of the Faculty Council.

Mr. William F. Duffy. Health, Physical Education, Coach of Junior Varsity Football, Junior Varsity Basketball and Junior Varsity Baseball.

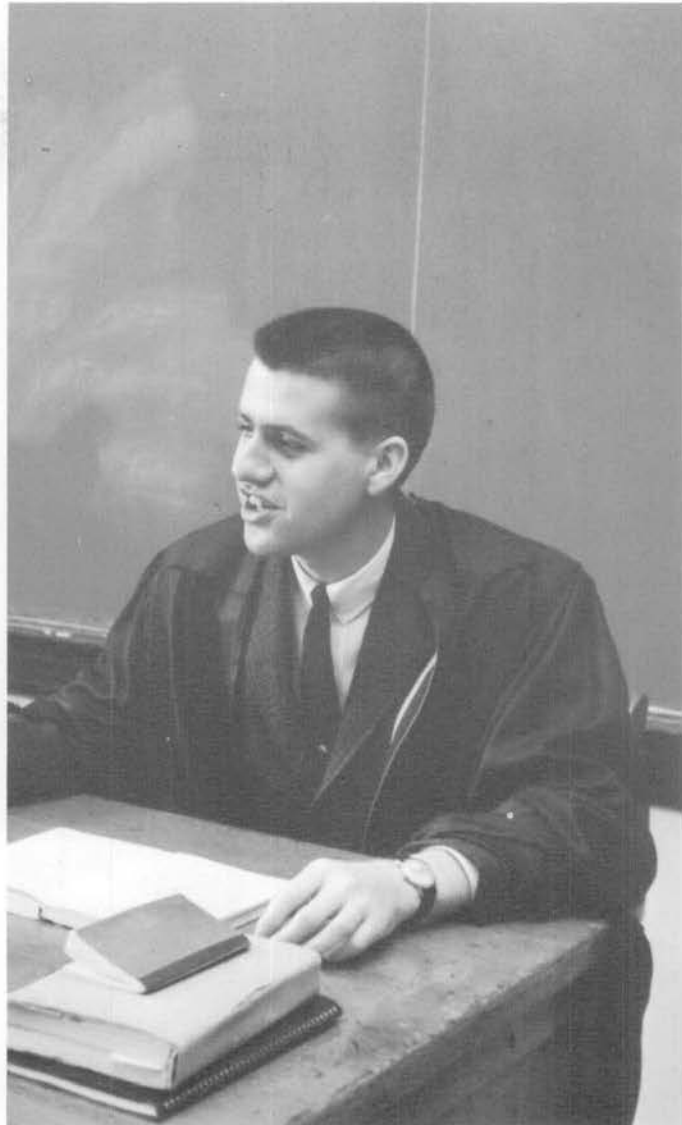

Rev. Daniel J. Burke, S.J. Theology.

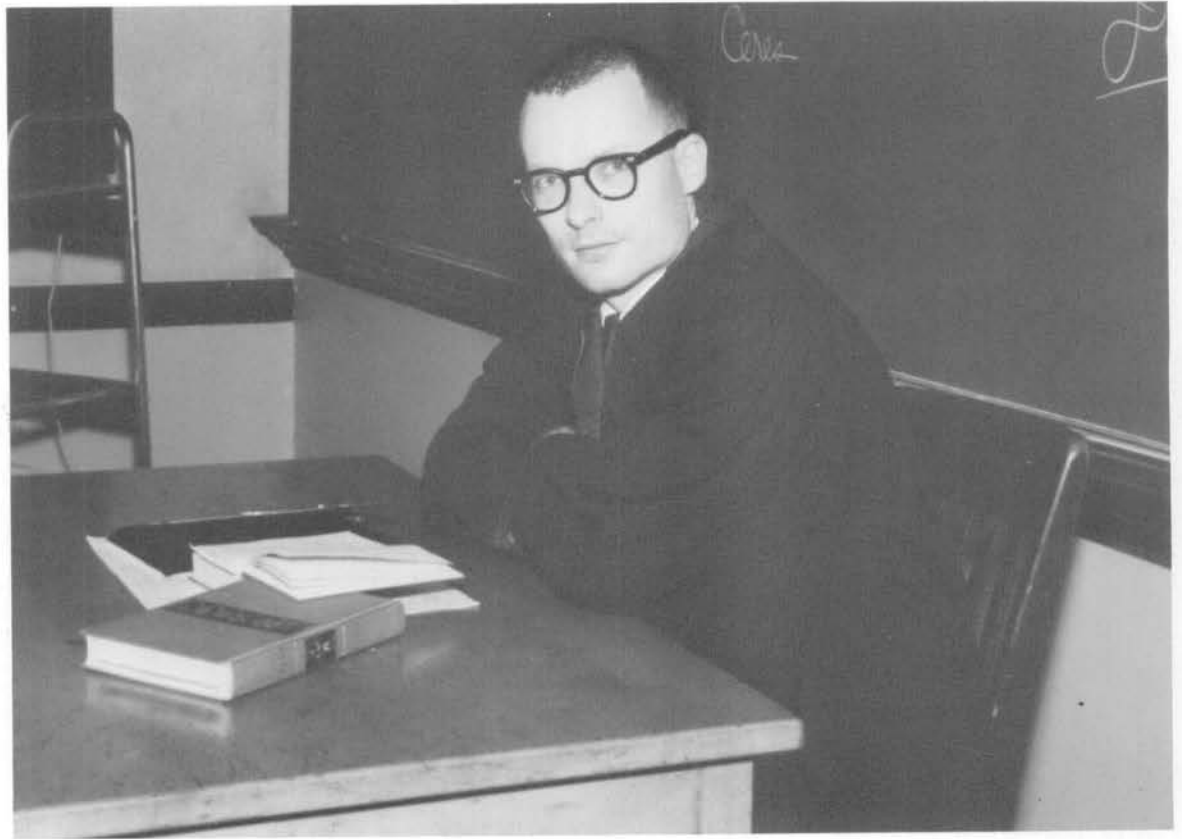

Rev. Joseph G. Musselman, S.J. Chairman of the Science Department, Chemistry.

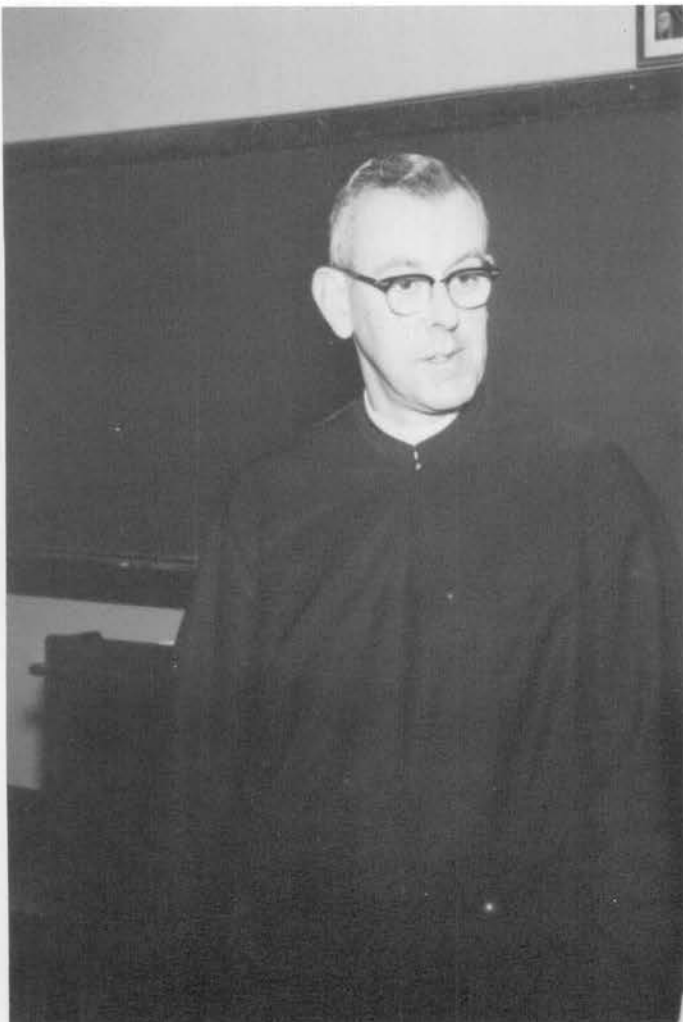

Mr. Raymond Sullivan. English, College Coordinator, Coordinator of Testing, Member of the Faculty Council.

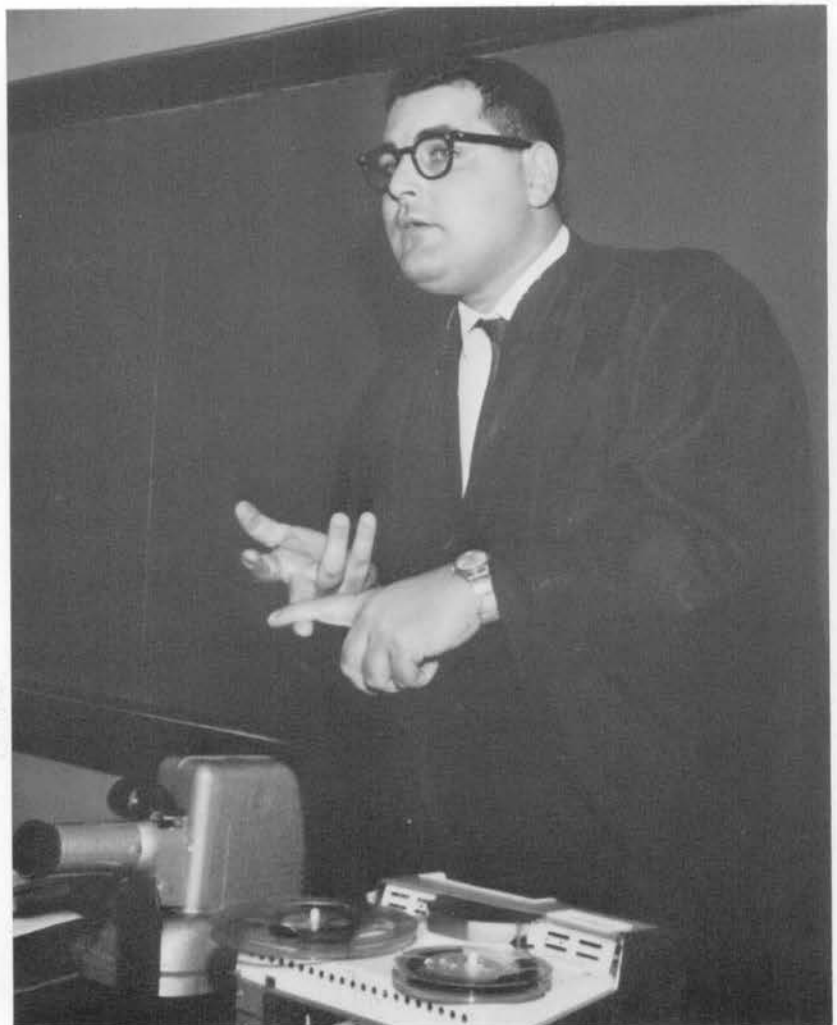

Mr. Michael J. Murray. English, Coach of Varsity Basketball.

Mr. John J. Murphy. French.

Rev. Bernard T. McElroy, S.J. Theology, Latin, Moderator of the Golf Team.

For the great unwashed, Calculus?

Yes, due to the tremendous mathematical pressures of today's world both in business and in the university, the teaching of the Calculus to all has become a propimate goal of Brooklyn Prep.

John Bennett

Rev. Ivan E. Nikolic, S.J. Librarian.

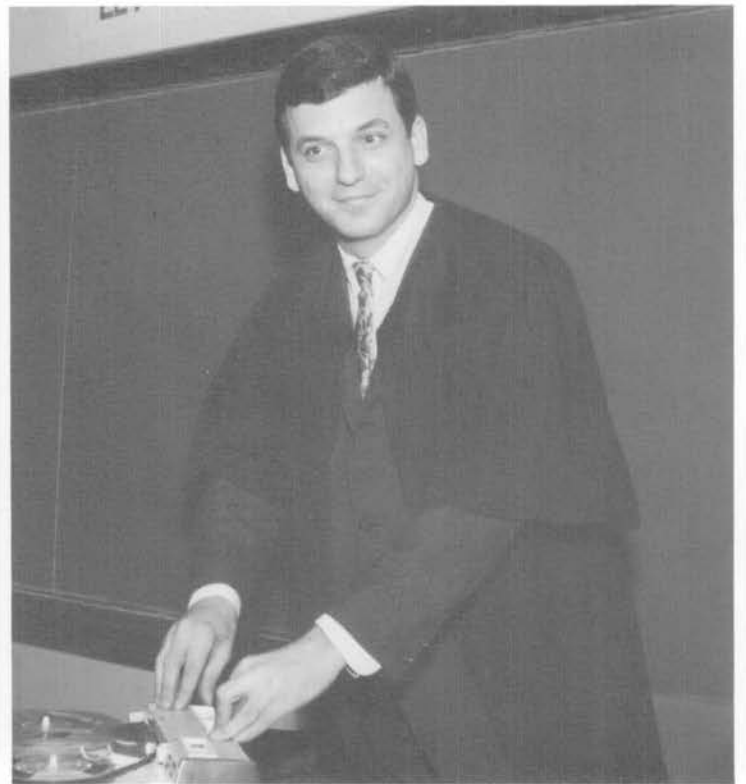

Mr. George F. Mahoney, S.J. American History, Assistant Director of Dramatics Society.

Each generation views the past from its own perspective and brings new insights to the study of what man has been. This fact presents one of the most fascinating aspects of history and is the reason why it can never lose its vitality.

George Mahoney S.J.

Rev. Francis C. O'Connor, S.J. Chairman of the Mathematics Department, Mathematics.

Mr. Thomas D. Garille. French.

Lingua! ἡ γλῶσσα.
 Эзык! Die Sprache!
 Language is the highway of communication.
 Through its often torturous lanes we are able to share
 in man's wisdom—
 ancient as well as contemporary. For this reason, the study of the classical and modern languages has always held a preëminent
 place in Jesuit education.

Richard V. Russo S.J.

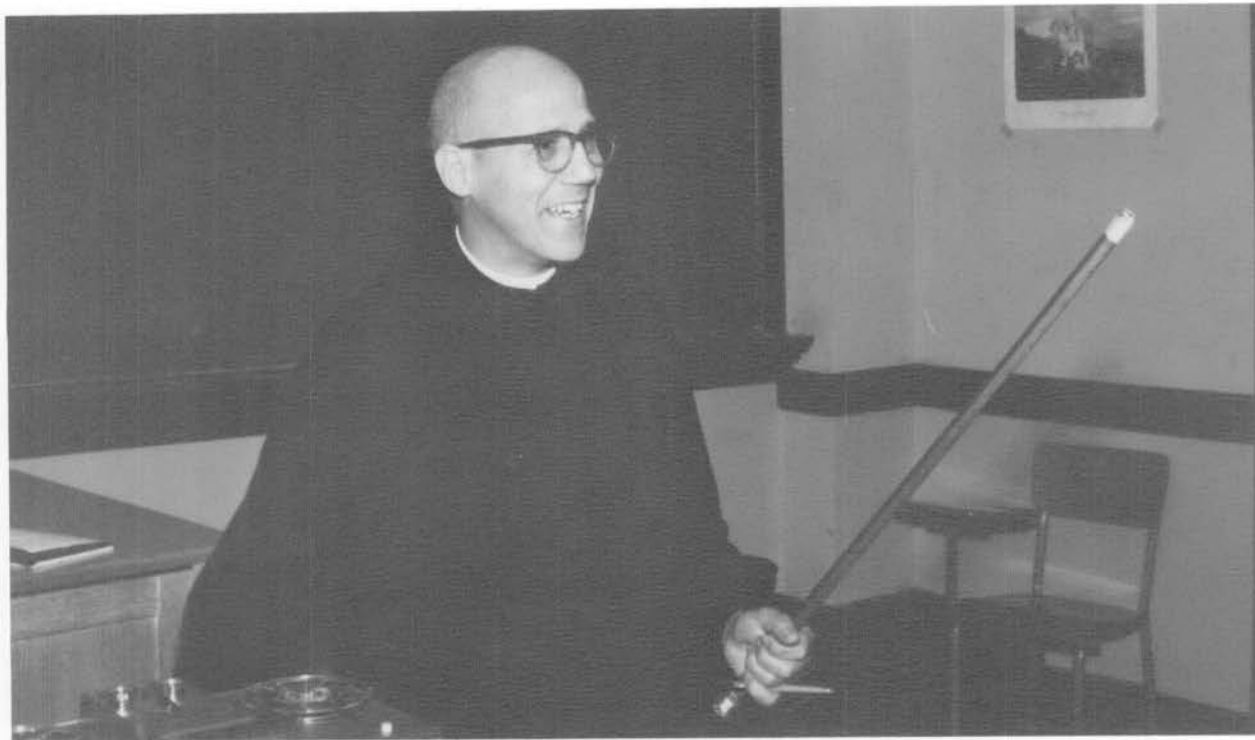

Mr. John J. O'Neill. Assistant Librarian, Library Science.

A science lab helps unlock your mind. Have the confidence to take the next step. Not every step is an advance, but there is no other way to advance than by taking steps.

Wm. Brink

*Studium linguae Romanorum fructus multos et laudabiles habet. Primum disciplinam lucide sentire et scribere atque exacte dicere docet. Deinde ille scripta poetarum et auctorum mundi antiqui aestimare discit.
 Postremo per illa scripta cognitionem originum hominis Occidentalis assequitur. Omnia haec ad excolendam illam humanitatem, quae est signum viri eruditi, servantur.*

Mr. Carmen J. Luisi. English, French, Faculty Advisor to the Poetry Club.

"Literature provides an emotional experience. And then, if we have the courage of our own feelings, it becomes a mine of practical truth. We have had feelings ad nauseam..." The teacher, perhaps, can inspire the courage.

D. Sullivan, S.J.

Mr. Donald J. Sullivan, S.J. English, Faculty Advisor to the Oratory Society.

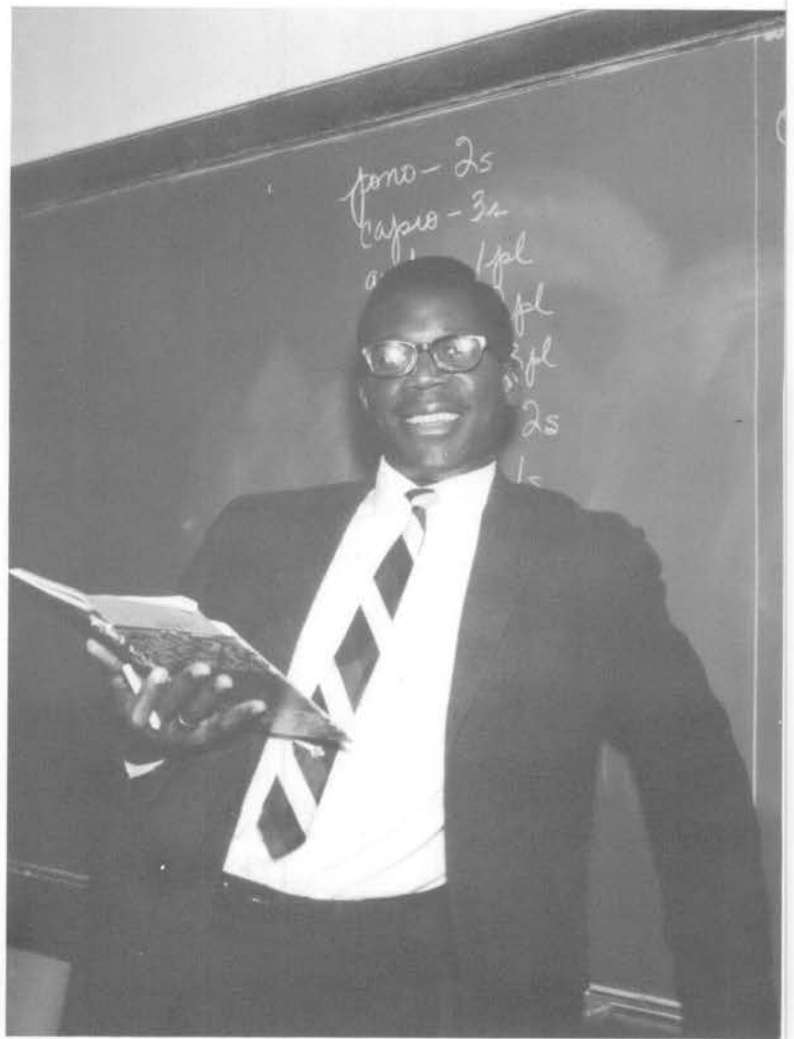

Mr. Michael R. Hoag, S.J. English, Latin, Director of Educational Television, Moderator of the Swimming Team.

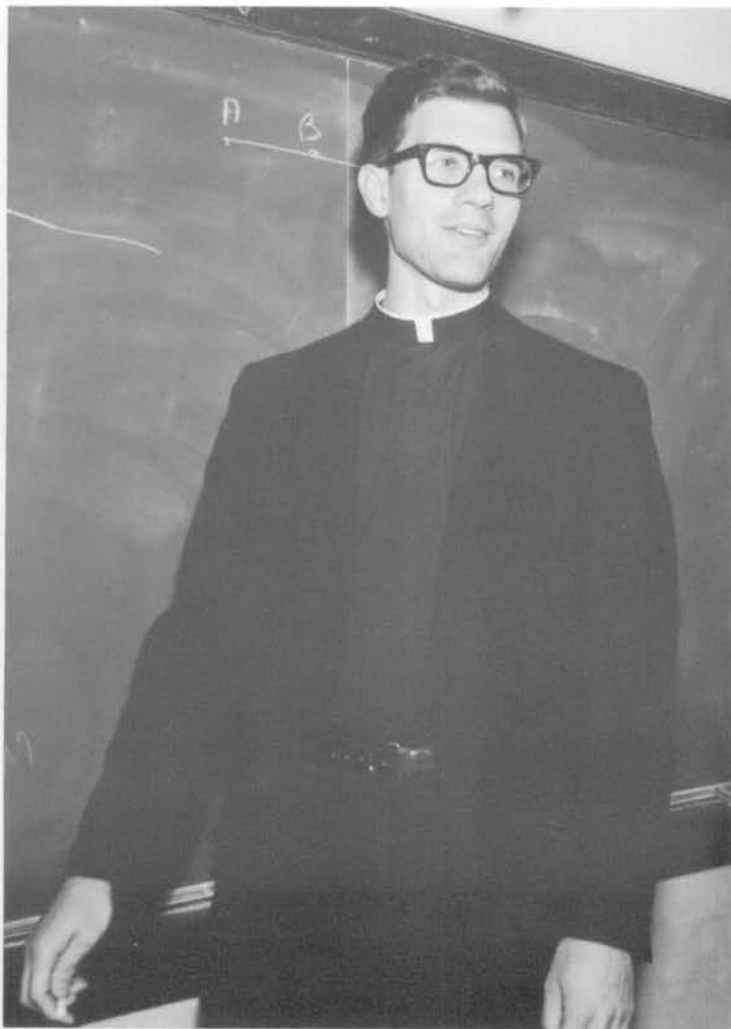

"... a little bit of heaven, a little bit of hell, and a whole lot of purgatory." Under this framework (the students' viewpoint of it, anyway), we try our best to provide the juniors with some appreciation of classical literature through Vergil & help the sophomores to master and apply the skills they learned as freshmen through Caesar & Cicero.

Most importantly though we try to correlate the past with the present in a sincere attempt to understand the homo sapiens and his too often neglected peer, the animal rationale.

Peter E. Carter

Mr. Peter E. Carter. Latin, Coordinator of Dance Committee.

Mr. Charles P. McGraw, S.J. Theology, Mathematics, Faculty Advisor to the Band, Coordinator of Dance Committee.

---

Pete was what Prep is. Humorous, serious, honest, searching, a classy guy, and a friend. He was happy and at home here. He loved Prep and Prep loved him. We miss him. But he has made it, and made it big.

Eagle Victory in Fiftieth Classic

The cameras were ready in the Press box above the mud splattered field. Drove of alumni from both schools swarmed into the stands sporting raingear on this cloudy Saturday morning. Fifteen minutes before game time the clashing red and blue jerseys of the two rivals flowed through the goalposts and the players began their pre-game exercises. Nerves were taut throughout the stadium as co-captains Bob Rovegno and Pete Perniciaro walked to the middle of the field for the toss. Brooklyn Prep won the toss and elected to receive. After formal introductions on WPIX-TV, the squads lined up for the kick-off. The whistle blew and the adrenalin began pumping. The first quarter proved to be a defensive battle between two powerful teams. The ball was exchanged from side to side until 1:56 in the second quarter when Charlie Russo behind the "big butt" offense scored the game's only touchdown, after a great offensive drive led by Rich Walters and Mike Callahan. The second half offense was spotty but the defense made up for it with great play by the entire squad. It was the fiftieth anniversary of this Brooklyn Prep St. John's classic and our win meant just a little more in this than any other St. John's game. For the alumni, the students, and especially the seniors, it was a memorable day for Brooklyn.

The 1967 Varsity Football season had its beginnings at Nyack Prep in Southampton, L. I. For one week the team drilled and learned a new platoon system. The defense displayed strength and speed while the "Eagles" on offense showed a great scoring potential. After two scrimmages the team had a winning spirit and expectations ran high.

September 23, opening day, saw Prep outclass St. Agnes. The defense held them to less than 100 yards, and scoreless. Interceptions by Bob Rovegno, Pete Perniciaro, and Greg Karp broke the Stag's attack. Richie Walters led his offense with two TD aerials and Steve Marengo drove seven yards for the nineteenth and final point. Two weeks later Ferris put an end to Prep's winning way. After a scoreless first half everything broke wide open. Ferris scored on a six yard drive, but Prep came back and blocked a punt return. Bob Rovegno carried the ball for Prep's only points on the scoreboard. Ferris' running attack and 3 TD's put the game away at 25-7. One week later at Randall's Island Prep bounced back from the last week's loss and the five year drought against Xavier. The defense led by Fred Muto held the Kaydets to 17 yards on the ground and a meaningless 6 points. The offense came through as Rich Walters ran for two TD's and passed to the games MVP, Rich Hickey, for the third. The Prep was 1-0 in the league with a tough 19-6 victory. The next three weeks were the darkest for the 67 squad. Injuries to starters Tim Delaney, and Vic Sama began to show. In addition Rich Walters, Bob Rovegno, Frank Daly, Larry Murphy, and Kevin Doherty joined the wounded. The Eagles didn't have the running game, or the secondary, to handle Herricks, or the size or strength to handle a tough Farrell. Fordham delivered the most heartbreaking blow when they completed three touchdown passes to win 20-13. However, there were many bright spots. Reception records by Mike Callahan and Rich Hickey and consistently tough defense from Charlie Russo, Fred Muto, Mike Cosgrove, Ruppert Prout and Pete Perniciaro showed the Prep's talent and spirit. Only injuries and bad breaks kept this squad from being a great one. Spirit was high all season, but reached a climax during the two weeks preparation for the fiftieth annual classic against St. John's.

Anticipating the offensive tactics, the secondary had to make use of its speed and brawn to outthink the quick hands and moves of the receivers and backs. Down by 3 with less than a minute left, the opposition lined up in a clichéd "T" formation with the quarterback obviously wasting as much time as possible. On the first play from scrimmage the fullback churned up 15 yards for a first down and enough time for insurance points. Taking his time getting back into the huddle, the quarterback certainly had but one thought in mind—glory. The flanker back came out of the huddle with a forelorn gleam in his eye, jumping right off the line at the hike. Running his usual pattern he suddenly broke towards the crossbar with unbelievable agility. The ball arched into the air as the receiver stretched his arms waiting for his moment. Suddenly he heard footsteps; the ball disappeared and through the mist of confusion he saw a blur—an unanticipated blur of defeat.

"Alright, we have all the articles, except the editorial and the Varsity Basketball and . . . most of the pictures. Let's start on the lay-out, since the whole thing is due at the printer's in two days. Where's Vito? Did you proof-read the articles? Good. Give them to someone else to proof-read again. And re-type them. What do you mean the pictures are missing? Find them! They have to be in the office somewhere.

"Is that the editorial? Did it get by? Good, proof-read it and have it typed over.

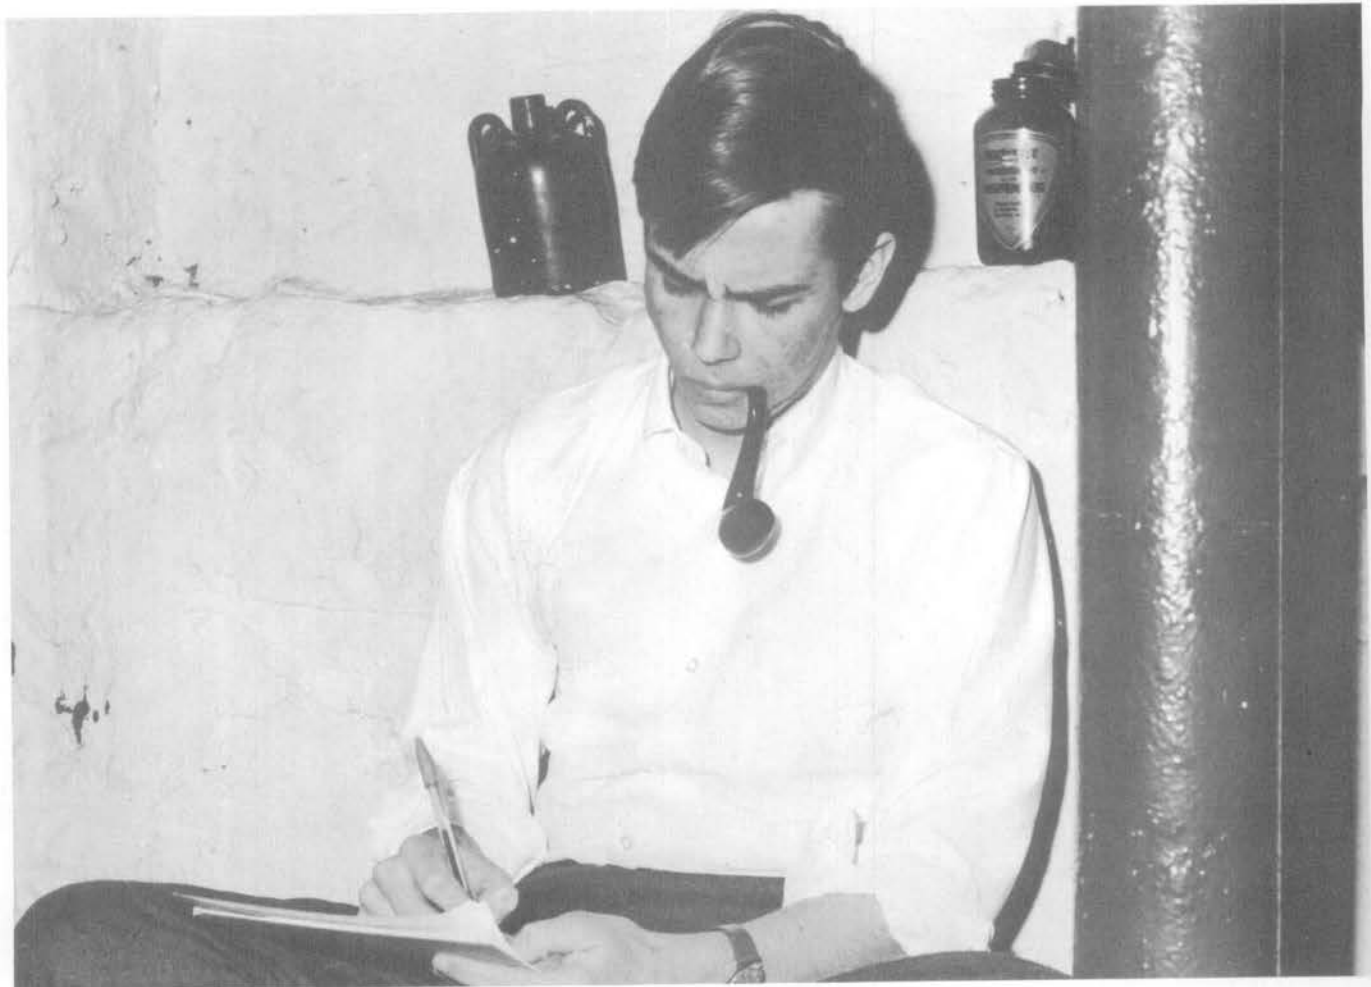

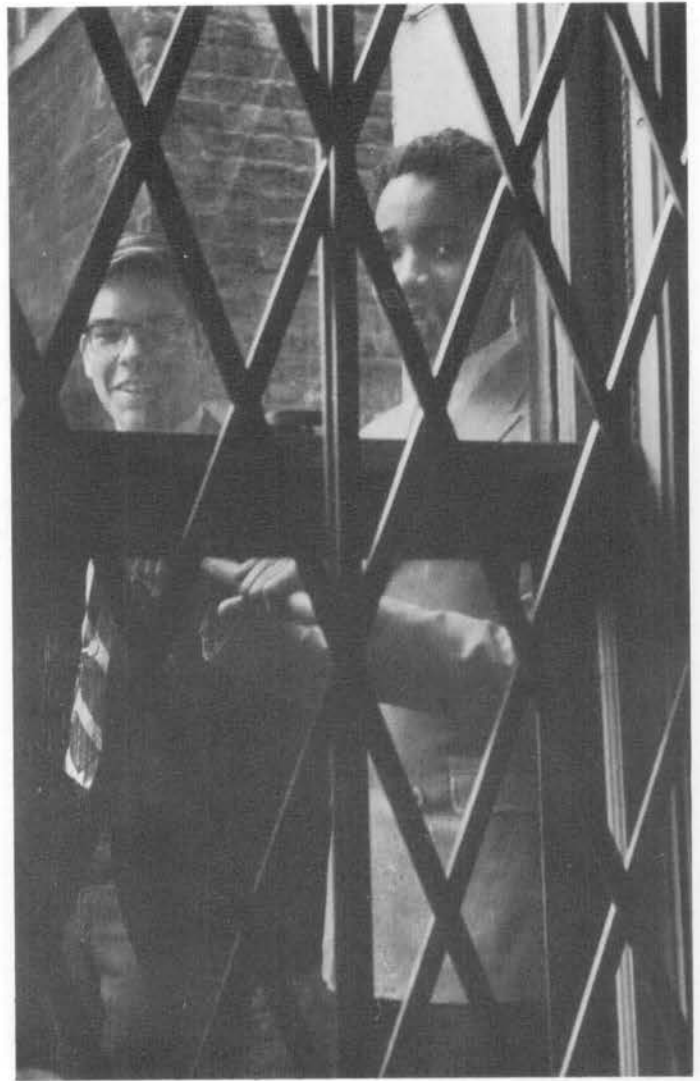

"Let me see how the layout is going. Good. Are you sure that's enough space for the article? If it doesn't fit and we have to edit, we might run into trouble.

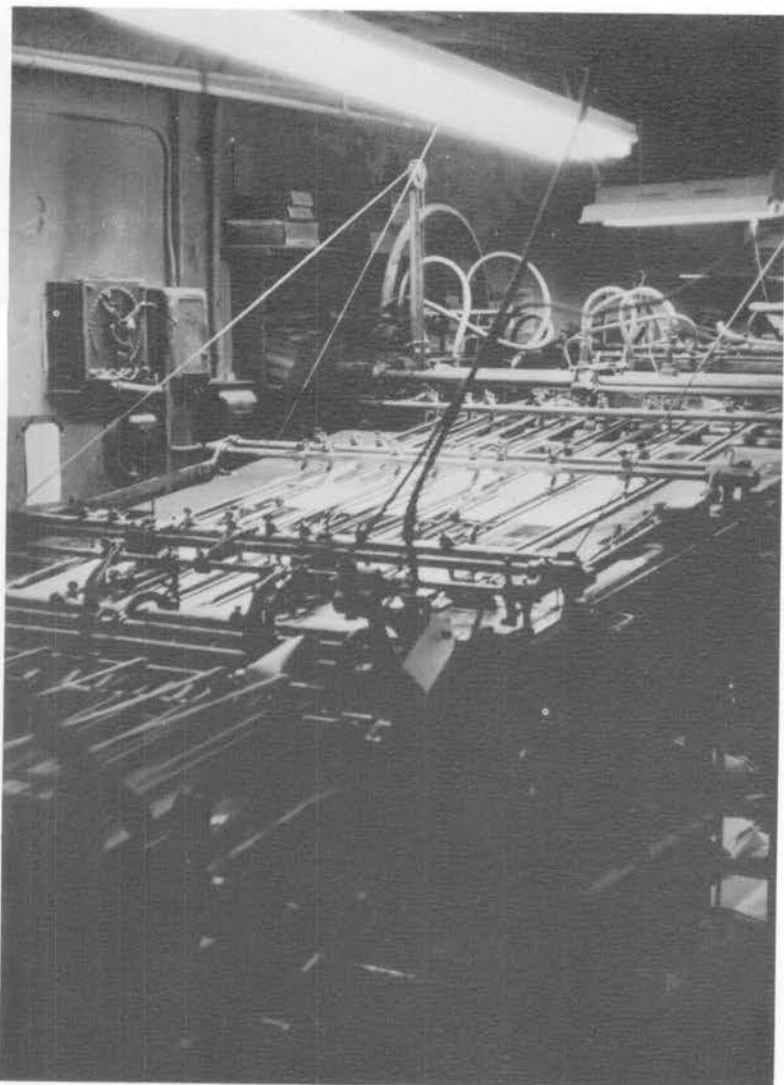

"Well, here you are! I hope you have the article. Fine! Have Mike read it and have it typed.

"Who wants to stay late today? In a few hours we could have the whole paper finished and ready. That's four. Alright. Start on that last page.

"You still haven't found the pictures? Turn around. They're behind you on the shelf. Here's the last article, all typed. Finished with the last page? Great, that's it, this edition is ready for the printer.

"Congratulations. Now, let's start assigning the articles for the next edition. Let's see, we can have one on . . . ."

Cross Country Team

It was not the type of day for any sort of outdoor activity. The sky was flooded with leaden grey clouds, and the wind blasted the hills that dominated Van Cortland Park.

Runners, representing different schools from the Metropolitan area, waited in small groups for any last minute encouragement. All had finished the necessary warm up sprints.

The start was fairly typical. A few runners, hopeful of eternal endurance, sprinted off at the crack of the pistol at a fantastic pace. The others kept their pace slow, each watching and waiting for the experienced ones to break and leave the pack.

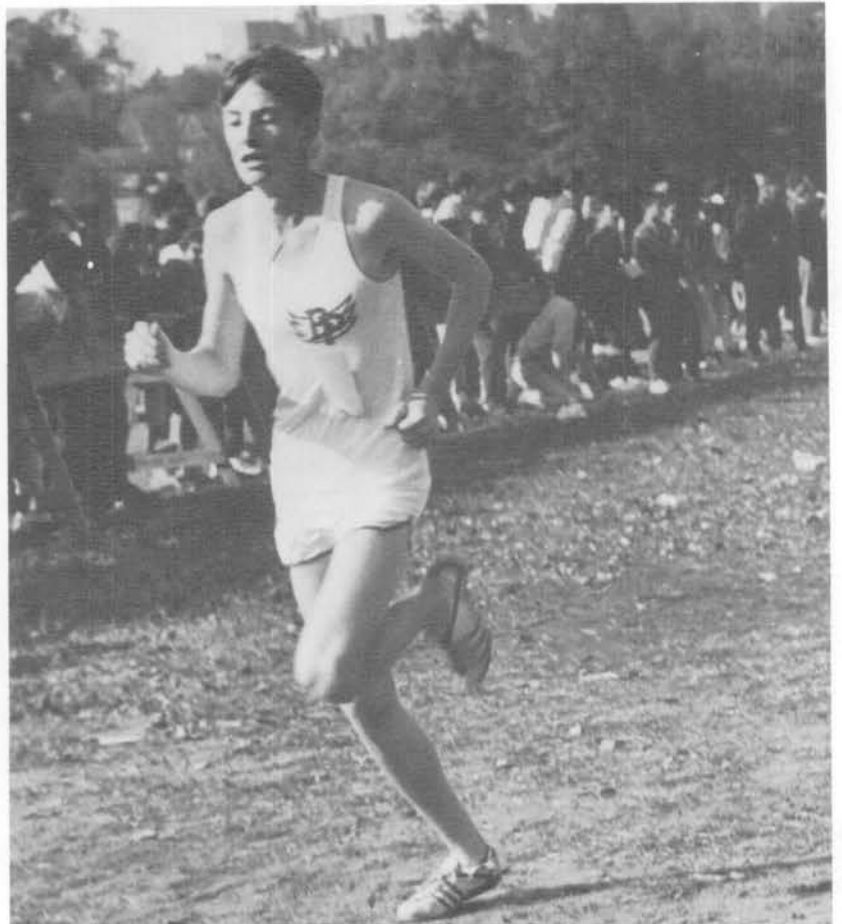

The grade of the park had left its mark on those in the race. By the time most had passed the half-way mark, the number of competitors had dropped. Those who were able to continue gasped for air and pulled with pain. The last few hundred yards heightened the agony.

The race was finished and the losers remembered only snatches of what they had gone through. For the winner it didn't matter.

TAKE 2 PIX #1- Image	2.00	We are all familiar with the classroom situation and when we try to make a television presentation, we must realize that the differences can present an obstacle. Television is primarily a visual medium, and therefore, we must convert as much as possible, our verbal ideas into visual one if we wish to communicate effectively through the medium of television.
TAKE 1 PIX #2- Brook		This is done fundamentally through images. Images are used primarily to convey meaning in a clear, concrete way. The more senses an image appeals to, the more experiential it is or the more meaning it conveys.
		For instance if I see the word BROOK, it conveys meaning but it

TAKE 3 SLIDE #2— Meandering		What are the available images in television? First, we have graphics which are cards giving written force to our statements.
TAKE 1 C.U. Narr.		They might also be illustrations drawn to give emphasis to the point we are making such as the resulting force of vectors.
TAKE 2 PIX #4— E = MC <sup>2</sup>		Also under graphics we could include photographs or pictures from magazines.
TAKE 1 PIX # 5— Vectors		We might also use slides such as this one of the sidewalk cafe in Paris.
TAKE 2 PIX #6— Girl		In the field of history often enough we find many films we may wish to make use of in part. This is an excellent way of presenting visual underlining to our voiced description of say the battles of World War II.
TAKE 3 SLIDE #3— Paris	4.45	When we are reading a play, is it not better to see it acted out and then discuss it. We might single out a particular scene to demonstrate the manifestation of character through setting and action as well as through dialogue. Here we have a scene from Act II of Samuel Beckett's Waiting For Godot .

We must use them in the scripting of a television lesson or else we will fail to make full use of the medium as it is meant to be used.

A black cross appeared through the hazy green mist that surrounded him. As he passed it he began to tuck himself into a ball for a turn. Rolling forward he exhaled sending a stream of bubbles toward the surface. Almost perpendicular to the wall now, he threw his full weight against the water and his feet, just visible over the turbulence, whirled quickly toward the wall. Extending his legs slightly, he drew himself to the barrier. Grunting to himself he pushed his feet firmly against the wall and his body straightened in the water. Leaving the wall behind, he flipped onto his stomach and took his first breath since beginning his turn. He sang to himself now in rhythm with his strokes and prepared to do the same thing at the other wall.

High Achievement Program

Every Fall, a group of grammar school children come to Brooklyn Prep to be helped in English and Mathematics. Here they have met an equal number of high school students who volunteered to tutor the seventh and eighth graders. Throughout the course of the school year, these tutors are called to exercise their patience when a student finds a problem too hard to solve. He must realize that it takes an eighth grader more time to understand something than it does a Sophomore in high school.

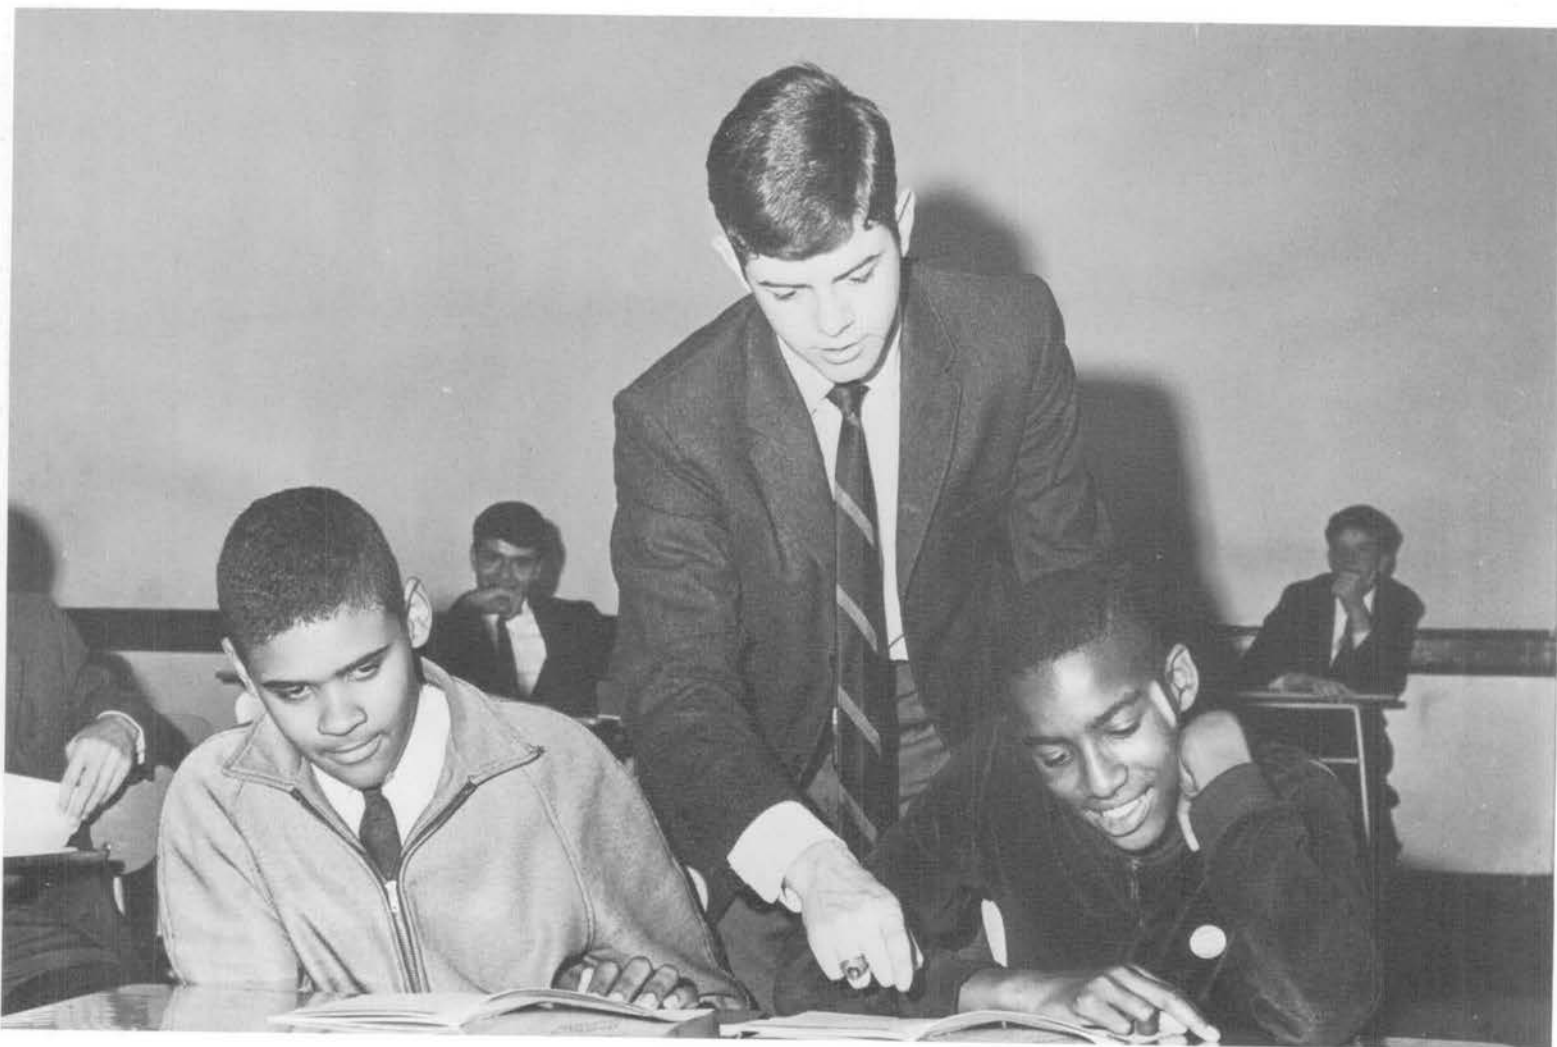

In return for giving of his time, he does not get a Varsity Letter or a trophy. All he gets is the personal satisfaction of giving of himself and seeing that he has helped his pupil understand something which before had been a mystery. Also he knows that he has been instrumental in the lifting of a poor boy to new possibilities.

In Brooklyn Prep, the Higher Achievement Program, under the leadership of Vito Sessa and Alex Avitabile has become one of the most popular activities with the participation of so many students who are willing to give of themselves without seeking a reward.

Brooklyn Prep Band

A good band is not composed of several musicians who carry a tune hoping it sounds decent. A good band starts out with individual musicians who practice, listen, and learn, and then practice until they can play perfectly by themselves. Only after they become acquainted with a piece do they try to play it as a group. Then they must practice as a group and adjust to each other until, finally, they can play a song and have it sound as if they were one man creating a single unified sound.

This is the rapport which the Brooklyn Prep Stage Band has developed under the guidance of Mister Charles McGraw S.J. and Mister Robert Cassella. Students have learned their music, practiced diligently, and have gained in quality what they have lost in numbers. The band today is a unified group of constantly improving musicians.

If you'll pardon the cliché that "practice makes perfect" then our band is reaching this state.

Brooklyn Prep Dramatics Society

Once a play has been cast, work can really get under way. There are preliminary readings, then script rehearsals with the basic blocking or planning of the fundamental stage action. More and more action is gradually added to the production until finally the cast is working without scripts and concentrating on all the important polishing touches without which the play is a mere recitation: delivery, diction, inflection, movement, gesture, and positioning, all of which must be moulded by the director into his desired interpretation.

While all this is going on the stage crew is working on the physical embellishments of the production. In the early stages, sketches are made and materials selected and ordered. Then about the same time that the cast puts down its scripts, the crew takes up its tools and construction begins. Meanwhile costumes are ordered, the make-up is replenished, tickets and programs are ordered, and the advertising campaign is begun.

In the final stages before the performance, everyone is in a frenzy. Finishing touches are being put on everything: the acting, the scenery, the programs and even the tickets. The costumes are picked up and the day of the dress rehearsal arrives.

- The stupid thing doesn't fit right.
- I'm not going onstage wearing that!
- They didn't send the pants!

Once the trauma of the costumes has been survived the rehearsal can get underway. The play is almost never left intact during a dress rehearsal. There is always some occasional unintentional editing of lines here and there. The director rants, the scenery falls, the stage is darkened when it should be lit and vice-versa, the curtain never closes on time, doors don't open, bells and telephones don't ring. In short it's a rare moment when something goes right.

It is now seven o'clock Friday night. Curtain is scheduled for eight.

- Where's the greasepaint?
- What's my first line?
- Don't spray that junk in my eyes.
- Is anybody in the audience yet?
- What do you mean it's ten to eight?
- Are you kidding? I'm not even made up yet. Where's my costume?
- What act is my first entrance in?
- Where's my thermos? Pour me some tea. I think I have laryngitis!

At eight twenty everyone is in position and ready to begin. The music starts. The house-lights dim. The curtains begin to part. And...

Varsity Basketball

Day after day the team labored through a long and tiresome practice. So far it had paid off. A victory tomorrow would give the squad first place to itself. Practice was especially hard today as Coach Murray wanted his team at a peak for the game. He went over the game plan carefully and told them what to expect from St. Francis. It was an exhausted but confident team that showered that night.

The school was for it, "psyched." Talk went around the classes about kids actually going to see an away game. A bus was rented and an enthusiastic bunch of supporters piled on.

On the floor the team went through preliminary practices. Excitement ran through the crowd as the opposing teams lined up. St. Francis controlled the tap and drew first blood with a short jump shot. Surprised by an aggressive press, Prep had the ball stolen and a lay-up was made. More caution this time, Prep moved the ball down court. A guard took a shot from outside, and watched helplessly as it bounced off the rim. St. Francis left a man hanging who converted on the fast break and was fouled going up. By this time, the crowd had long since sat down.

Junior Varsity Basketball

As the ball sailed toward the hoop, action was going on beneath. The players were stationing themselves for the anticipated rebound. In this respect Prep had the advantage of free movement as defense. A neat body block kept the opposing center out of the key until ours had gotten possession of it. He wheeled about and watched the fast-breaking guard angle toward the basket. Instantly he was in action. He threw a long line drive pass across the court. As the ball hurried on its way the back-courtman slowed his pace so their paths would meet smoothly. As the ball struck his hands he released his left, and pushed the ball down with his right. The ball hit the floor in a low dribble, he brought it back up and started his leap. In mid-air he aimed the ball and tossed it into the basket. Another play had worked.

Freshman Basketball

In the middle of the court stood Prep's lanky center, facing his rival from St. John's. There, surrounded by his teammates, he crouched in wait for the opening tap of the season. He glanced quickly over his shoulder to determine where he was to tap the ball. Sitting nervously on the bench was Mr. O'Connor—this was his opening tap too. Now the center scanned his opponent. He seemed much less anxious for the jumpball. Calmly the referee flipped the ball in front of him and muttered instructions to the two centers. Prep's center heard nothing. His eyes froze on the ball as he nodded agreement. Shaking his head, he blinked his eyes. The game came back; he remembered the opening plans. He got himself ready in a flood of mental activity. He started the adrenalin spins throughout his body. The referee tossed the ball straight up. Instinct seized the center as he leaped upward shooting his whole self through the ceiling. His hands stretched out for the ball, now floating lazily in the air. The leather made his hand tingle as he flipped it backwards over his head.

A boy and a girl eating lunch on the back porch and just talking. Crossing a stream on a fallen tree. Two guys sitting astride the roof on a foggy night. Celebration of the Eucharist in the living room among friends. Miserable hamburgers but fair spaghetti. Sitting near a log fire talking about what's on your mind—knowing it worries others. Raiding the refrigerator at 3:00 A.M. Playing cards with a nun. Chopping wood. Singing through Mass and then through dinner. Feeling so happy that you don't want the experience to end. You guys need a poem? How long? Yeah, okay. Got someplace where I can sit and compose? Well, at least there could be a rug or mat or something. Now, let's see . . . "Once upon a time, so—", nah, too kiddy. "While I sat beside a brook—". Hey, I should get a topic first. Love? I don't know. Sex? I don't think it would be approved. Happiness? Yeah, that's it. "While I sat beside a brook . . . hmmm . . . A bird flew down beside me—" Yeah, Wow! I'm a Thoreau! "And when I turned to have a look . . . A feeling came inside me." Heh, that's it. Now let's see, "A brook . . . Down beside me . . . take a look . . . inside me." Good. ". . . the birdie looked at me and—" Oh pshaw, no. Yeah, the bird can be a symbol. Of what? Happiness itself? Sadness? How many lines does this have to be anyway? Hey, do you guys really need a poem? I mean REALLY. Good. No, it's not that, but I think, I, uh, may be too deep for most of the people.

Alright, now, uh, a little more to the left. Good. Now turn your right knee a bit closer to the door. Hey, this isn't Vogue, idiot. Okay, look snobby. Not like a jerk, like a snob. Like you know it all. Good. Now let me see. The lighterectolater has to have a reading less than the furlofold of the DON'T MOVE cottlenob. Good. The film's in, the flash is connected, my shoelace is tied, so DON'T MOVE. Alright—click—now we'll try something over here in the light. Okay, look alienated. You're Brooklyn Prep personified as being dissatisfied with society's trends. What do you mean, "What do you mean?"? Just turn your head and look like you're alone in a closet—very funny. Look, we've got a deadline. Okay, hold it—click. Good. You're really very very photogenic, but let's move on to poetry.

One of the three other contestants walked over to him with an extended hand. He turned slowly and shook hands. Glancing down, he noticed that he was quivering. Unconsciously he stepped up onto the starting block and began limbering up. Nervously he raised his arms, and then dropped them one at a time in an effort to simulate swimming motions. Letting his hands drop at his sides, he rubbed them on his suit and started shaking them at his waist. Shouts from the stands and from his teammates went unnoticed as he concentrated on the long race before him. A twitch started in his left leg. He began to move it uneasily. The referee's whistle brought him to attention. He listened as the ref began to speak. Having read the rules, the ref readied the starting gun.

"Swimmers! Take your marks. Go!

He dives and in the silence begins to think.

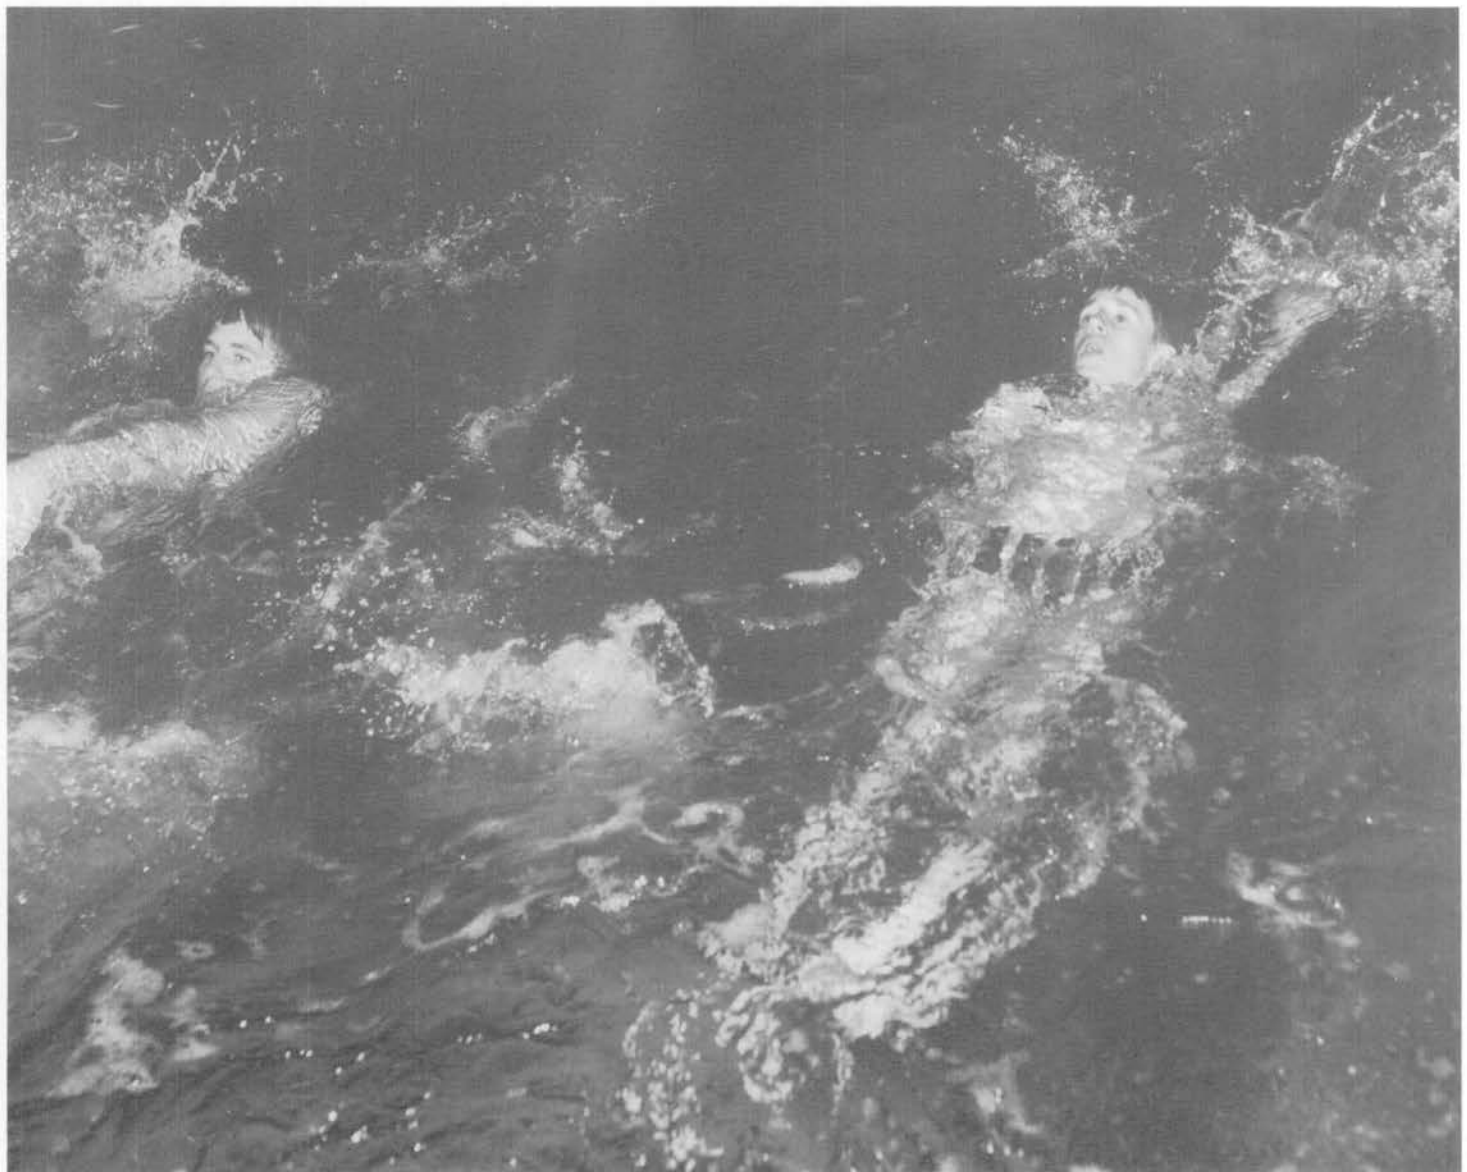

"After this lap, only 15 more . . . only 15 more."

14. At which point will a line passing through (6, 8) be tangent to the circle,  $x^2 + y^2 + 2x - 4y - 9 = 0$ ?

—"Integrate the circle. Limit of y for change in x approaching zero. Sounds good, but now, how? No constant. Power rule? Perhaps. Here: "derivative of sum equals sum of derivatives." Good, use it. Now passing through (6, 8). Hmm . . . slope formula utilizing derivative of above. Solve for x in terms of y and, I think I have it."

15. Find volume of figure generated by rotating the equation  $y = 2x^2 + x - 4$  about the x axis between x equal to 1 and x equal to 3.

—"Four minutes left."

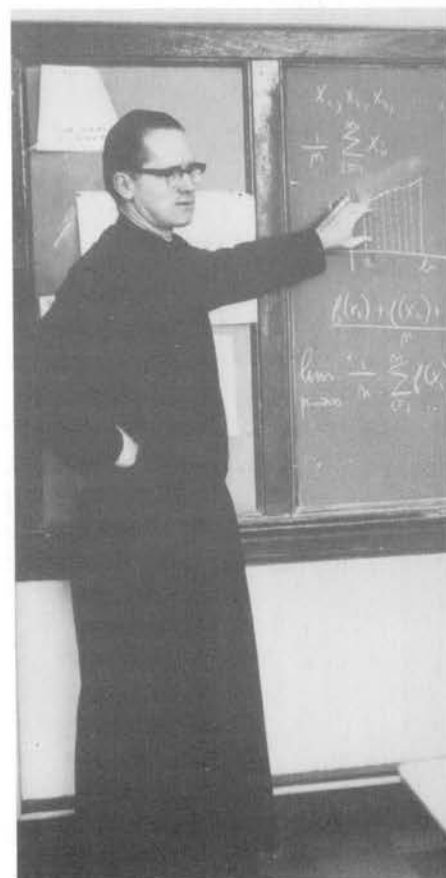

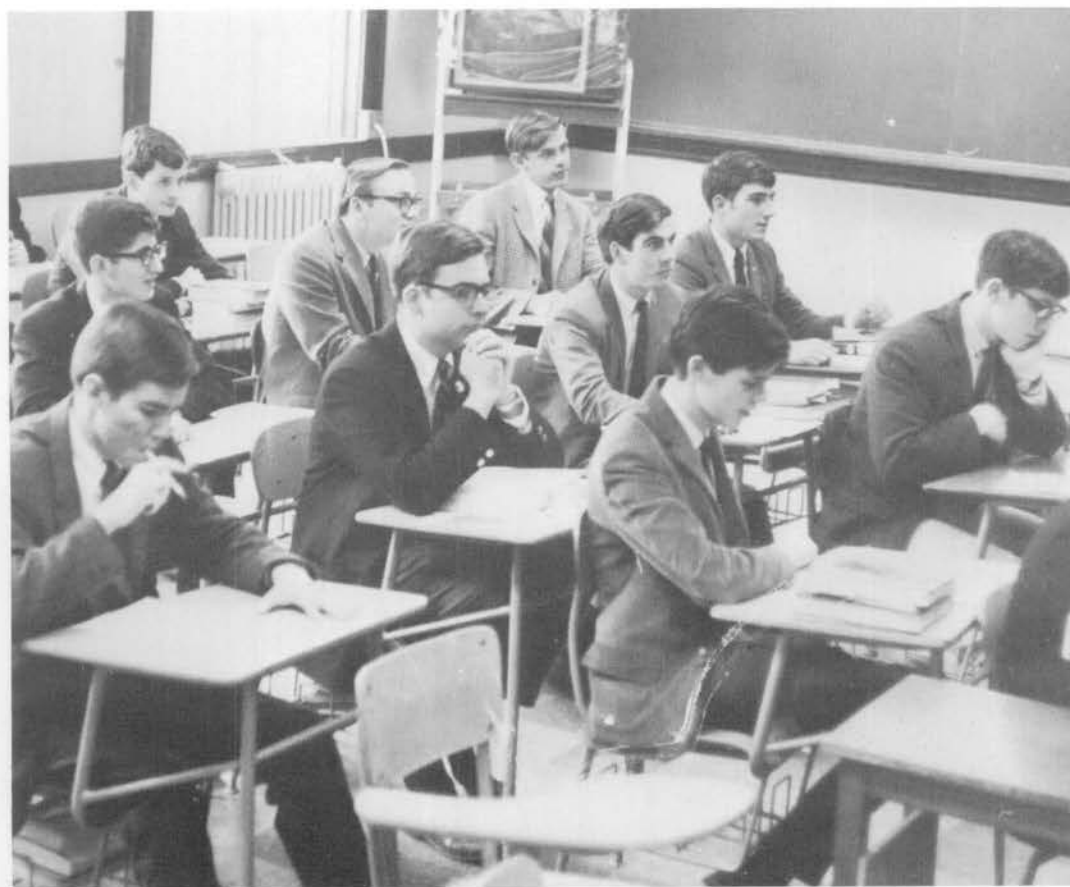

—"Integrate—quick . . . for a delta v over the interval (1, 3). Hurry . . . two times pi times difference in ydx. Integrate by terms . . . subtract . . . answer b."

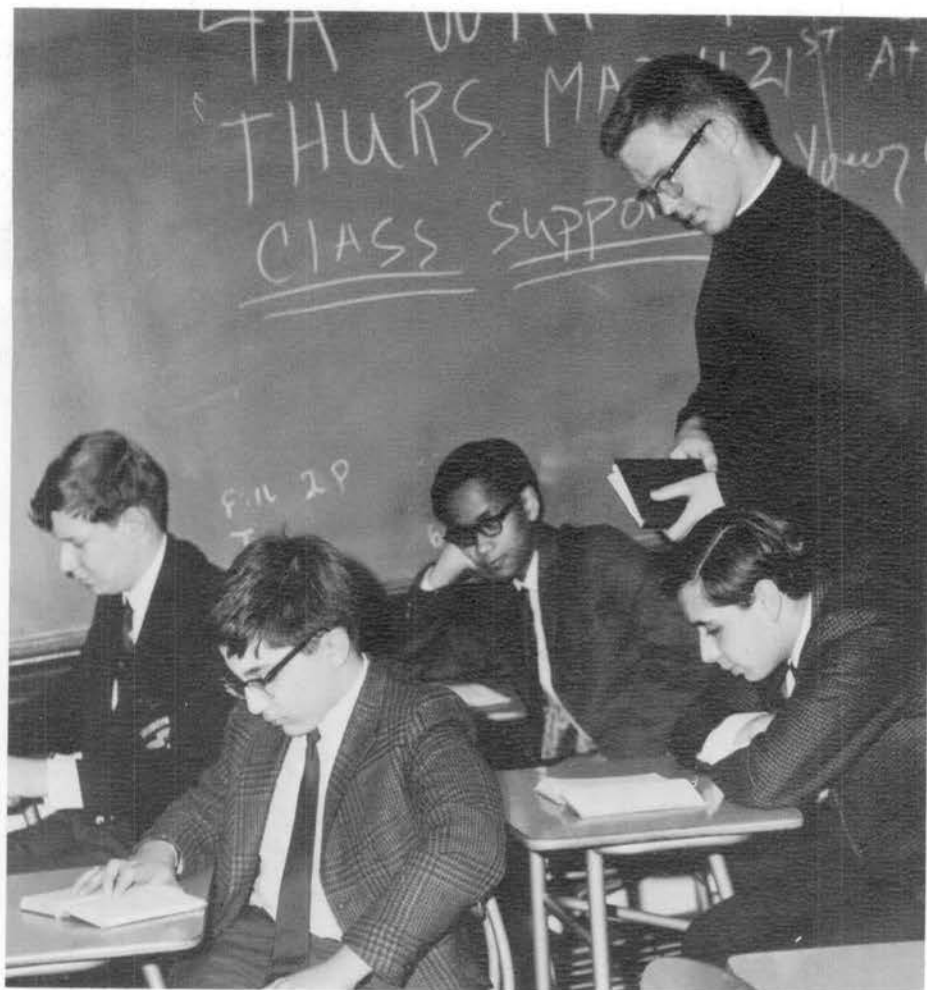

—"One minute."

"It works, fill in b."

Latin Sight Teams

Tradition always seems to be an ugly word. It stands for outdated conventions that we are too advanced to follow. It conjures up the ideas of a middle-age philosophy which bears no relevance to our times. Yet we seem to be forgetting that our roots are deep in these ages and, to more fully understand ourselves, we must know our origin. Perhaps Latin Sight is dismissed as being too intellectual for us, but it is preserving the sense of background which is very necessary for an expanding society.

Monsieur, vous êtes très gentil. I am but a poor foreigner who has come to your fair shores to see the sights. You would think that I was the ambassador the way you treat me. Why one of you even met me when I debarked in New York. I always thought you Americans were méchants about us. Maybe notre roi ne vous plaît beaucoup mais le Grand Charles est très intéressant. But you students understand what I mean. Even a small lycée in Brooklyn has a group dedicated to us. Your Père Farrand took you to la belle France, no? Well then you know what I mean. We are indebted to you for your kindness. To think that you are interested in a poor Frenchman and his wife! Vous serez les vrais Américains qui aideront la paix du monde.

German Club

One can learn just so much in a language Klasse. While you can try to master the guttural tongue, you kennsen kein German. To conquer a foreign element you must realize what lies behind the words. The German mind, its philosophy and logic, is the greater task at hand. Although the German Club is limited in its endeavors, not holding its course in the Grand Hotel, it is beginning to succeed. Father Beck's small group has the basic understanding of our iron ally on the continent. St. Cloud can't do that.

Russian Club

To follow the DAILY NEWS, one would presume that Russia is a nation of blood thirsty boors. Yet, in reality, the Russians are a people who have slowly progressed into a dynamic nation without losing their unique culture. Their history is as old or older than ours. If the Russian Club can discuss the common view of this world giant in any small way, they will be successful.

. . . When you relax it like this, it becomes loose. . . Now take the string in this hand . . .
and cross it like this with the string in this hand.
. . . Okay. . . Bring this string under with this finger . . . now pull . . . good. Now we have to make a loop. Do you know what a loop is? . . .
That's right. . . Take this string in your right hand—this hand— . . . and bring it across here.
. . . Feel the loop? . . . Good. . . Hold it that way with this finger. . . Don't let the loop out. Now carefully take the string in your left hand—this hand— . . . and bend it like this to make another loop. . . Bring this loop around the front here
. . . good. . . Place it under the other loop over here . . . no, watch me . . . I mean . . . no . . .
bring it under like this . . . good. . . Now, feel this good. . . Now pull both loops like this, and you're finished.

A small figure enters the room early. It is empty except for the vacant desks and chairs. A podium looms over the front. He finds a piece of chalk and scribbles a complicated sentence on the board. He turns and stares at the blank wall in front of him. Soon, a flood of eyes and ears and mouths will inundate the sea of space before him. Now, he is still alone. Rumaging through an old attaché case, he produces a metal file of quotes. Then two bespectacled and bevested opponents take their corners and smile, so benevolently. His partner arrives late, as usual, and without evidence. A cloud of smoke marks the coming of the judge. The field of battle is ready. Eyes are set. Ears are tuned. The chairman gives him the signal and he is on his own, alone.

"Thank you, Mr. Chairman . . ."

Varsity Baseball

Charlie had just about enough of his team. He would show them now. With a mighty Wind-up and delivery the ball crossed the plate striking out the powerful St. John's Player ending the top of the ninth inning. Now Charlie Brown's All Stars representing Brooklyn Prep had their last chance to win the rivalry game. The first two players up struck out on five pitches (?). This left it to Lucy to keep the game alive. Well, an amazing thing occurred. Lucy led her team in a rally scoring 175 runs. It was now bases loaded, two out, with Charlie Brown coming to bat. Everyone chanted for a pinch hitter. Knowing Charlie would strike out, Coach Wally Doolan stepped from the dugout and called for that dynamic baseball player, "Peanuts." With a long pompous stride, "Peanuts" set himself at the plate and the crowd let out with a unified "boo." The next three pitches all were high making the count 3 and 1. The huge St. John's pitcher took the sign and delivered a swerving curve. "Peanuts" took a hefty cut—connecting with nothing but air. It was pretty tight now. Every student at Brooklyn Prep was filled with excitement. This would be the pitch. The pitcher readied himself, as did "Peanuts." Finally, he let go with a meatball down the center of the plate. "Peanuts" was sure he could plant this over the fence and through the fruit store's window. He leaned back and swung as hard as he could, only to hear the smack of the ball into the catcher's glove. "Strike three, you're out!" ruled the umpire. The game was over—Prep lost by one run.

Charlie Brown climbed the pitcher's mound after everyone had left the field. Turning to the school building he calmly stated, "No matter how hard we try, we always lose by 1 run."

Track

A gun sounds, the hearts of all the runners on the starting line pound. As the first leg of the relay enters the first turn, elbows and sticks smack one another. The cinders encircled with white, powdered lines shoot up from the runners' spikes. Utter confusion for the first few seconds. Everyone vying for the ideal position. Gasps of breath are more frequently heard. The runner's legs beginning to tighten up. He heaves himself forward. He has to keep up with the pack. His eyes stare vehemently out over the straightway. He sees the final turn. His arms move at a quicker pace. He clutches the stick in his wet hand. Forcing his knees up higher, his momentum picks up. A hundred yards go, a final effort. He kicks in. Lifting up his heavy arms, passes off. Over.
